

RBG's Last Wish

Description

I worked all my days, and half the nights, too opening doors, for all to come through
Now I wait and I wonder, how can I rest in grace?
Before my bones can settle, they're filling my place.
The world's topsy-turvy, words don't mean a thing
No room for grieving, or remembering
Now I wait and I wonder how can I rest in grace?
Before my bones can settle, they're filling my place.
I asked for no favors because of my sex just that my brethren take their feet off our necks.
It was my last wish that my seat on the bench would wait to be filled by a new president
I served to make fairer this world for us all
You must carry on, and live by love's law
So let my bones settle; there's no need for haste
Allow me some grace, before filling my place
